presents a program on

Postpartum Depression

Dark Side of the Full Moon delves into the unseen world of maternal mental health in the United States – exploring the disconnect within the medical community to effectively screen, refer, and treat the 1.3 million mothers affected each year, and giving a face and voice to the countless women who have suffered in silence. The film highlights inconsistencies of care and uncovers the history, origins, and mythology surrounding postpartum depression, while focusing on peer-to-peer support groups, relevant policy, research, and treatment. The stories are told through interviews with survivors, family members, therapists, psychologists, doctors, scientists, nurses, midwives, researchers, lawyers, and scholars.
